Samsara	The cycle of birth, death and rebirth in Hinduism.	Key Knowledge
Moksha	Release from the cycle of samsara where the atman is reunited with Brahman.	Most Hindus don't think of Brahman as a being (like the Christian God) who is separate from Creation – Brahman is in every single living thing. The universe was not created by Brahman, it actually is Brahman. A way of understanding this is to think of Brahman as the energy within the universe.
Karma	Someone's positive actions and intentions lead to good karma and leave a positive imprint on a person, but negative actions and intentions lead to bad karma and leave the opposite. Good and bad karma can affect someone in their current life and also affect their lives to come.	Many Hindus believe that there are different duties (dharma) that should be performed at each stage of their life (the ashramas). Living according to dharma brings good karma.
Aum	The aum is an important symbol in Hinduism Hindus consider Aum to be the universal name of the Lord and that it encompasses all of creation. Many Hindus consider it to be the first sound when the universe was created.	Most Hindus believe that the atman within each living thing is trying to find its way back to Brahman. They try to live well so that in each new rebirth they grow closer to achieving this.
Ashramas	The four stages of human life.	Gandhi, a famous Hindu, was a lawyer in India who protested against British rule – he wanted India to rule itself. He followed the principle of ahimsa (non-violence), promoting peaceful protest. His wisdom and teachings are often quoted.
Mahabharata	A sacred text within Hinduism.
